Thanks Ryan.

I want to point out the credit card which is in my personal name has circa £3000 outstanding on it because the payment was altered was altered to the minimum amount.

This either needs to be added to the list at some point as another due debit (albeit it can be addressed after tomorrow), or it needs to be transferred into George's name (or he can nominate someone who agrees) seeing as George seems to insist in being able to act as a 52% shareholder and shadow director. I am no longer willing to extend any form of credit to the company using my name until accounts are filed and all shareholder and debt related matters are addressed. Given it looks like there is more chance of Ann Widdecombe completing the London Marathon on stilts than any sort of accounting / shareholder / debit matters being amicably addressed in the short term, I'd like I'd like to see get the company credit card transferred into someone else's name tomorrow or early next week as it is should not be hard to transfer this to someone else who's on the banking mandate. If this is an issue, then I want to know ASAP. I trust GB / AV will pick up on this given we all know Ivalyo and Williams are not actually directors by virtue of how they were appointed and the fact they never actually interact with the company first hand.

Thanks,
Jase.

Please let me know what payments you would like to raise and if I have missed any invoices off of the list.
